

Harbor General Cited By 'Modern Hospital'

The award, Modern Hospital of the Month, has been presented Harbor General Hospital by Modern Hospital, a national medical publication. The citation is given to hospitals across the nation which provide new concepts in hospital design and medical care.

The $11.6 million hospital serves more than one million residents in the southern part of the county.

Selected by a panel of hospital consultants, the 615-bed hospital was commended by the magazine for its "excellence of architectural design, functional planning, economy of construction and operation, and proper provision for hospital needs of the community."

As planned, designed and engineered by the Harbor General Hospital architects, a joint venture consisting of Welton Becket, Adrian Wilson, Paul R. Williams, and Francis J. Heusel, the new structure integrates an eight-story central acute unit with a two-story outpatient clinic and a two-story south wing which contains one of the nation's largest hospital laboratories.

ADVANCED design concepts for which the structure was cited include location of administrative offices of the top floor; creation of complete, self contained nursing units on one-half of each floor; orientation of surgery in relation to the clinic; the complete electronic control system; and orientation of the structure on the site.

"In moving into our new building, we had to redesign our mode of operation in many respects," said A. L. Thomas who served as administrator for Harbor General Hospital.
